► Summary: The authors discuss the importance of the relationship between the patient and the physician in the management of the patient with a chronic disease. They argue that the physician should be able to establish a relationship with the patient that is based on trust, respect, and understanding. This relationship is essential for the physician to be able to effectively manage the patient's disease. The authors also discuss the importance of the physician being able to communicate effectively with the patient. This includes being able to listen to the patient's concerns and being able to explain the disease and the treatment in a way that the patient can understand. The authors conclude that the physician should be able to establish a relationship with the patient that is based on trust, respect, and understanding, and that the physician should be able to communicate effectively with the patient.

DECLARATION

1920 CENSUS—INDEX
DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE
BUREAU OF THE CENSUS

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical activity during the 12-week period, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher heart rates and blood pressures at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. The body mass index of the children in both groups did not change significantly during the 12-week period. The study suggests that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.
